Program Overview

The INTBAU Mexico Summer School is a two-week intensive program focused on traditional urbanism and architecture, which will take place from May 29 to June 13, 2026, in the historic heart of Mexico City, with the support of INAH, ASINEA, and the Ministry of Culture. With the Postal Palace, one of the country’s most emblematic buildings, serving as the main venue, the program combines field research, studio work, and hands-on practice, integrating urban analysis, architectural design, and traditional representation techniques.

The program will bring together a distinguished national and international academic faculty, composed of specialists in archaeology, heritage, urbanism, and traditional design. It will be structured in two phases: a first phase, from May 29 to 31, as part of the Latin American Conference on Traditional Architecture and Urbanism (including other INTBAU Chapters), and a second phase, from June 1 to 13, corresponding to the Summer School, with theoretical classes, practical workshops, and studio work focused on historic buildings and spaces within the Historic Center, with special attention to pre-Hispanic, Baroque, and Neoclassical architectural traditions.

Participants will develop an urban and architectural proposal for two highly relevant and sensitive areas of the Historic Center, integrating housing, mixed-use spaces, public space, and archaeological sites. The project will be worked on using manual representation tools such as sketches, architectural drawings, and watercolor as fundamental instruments of design thinking, culminating in a public exhibition at the Postal Palace, evaluated by a specialized jury. Mexico City has been chosen as the venue due to its condition as one of the most complex and stratified historic centers in Latin America, where the coexistence of pre-Hispanic, colonial, and contemporary heritage offers an exceptional laboratory for reflection and practice of traditional urbanism and architecture.

Note on Contact Hours:

The total 120 hours will be completed through a combination of lectures, site visits, workshops, and team work at the end of each day, ensuring practical application of theoretical content and development of final projects.

Non-local Students: Recommended arrival May 28 – June 14

Hotels, breakfasts, transportation to scheduled visits, materials, and basic medical insurance are included.

Local Students: In addition to classes and workshops, transportation to scheduled visits and materials are included.

Projects

Project 1 · Classical Regeneration of the Bellas Artes Surroundings

A classical-traditional architectural complex behind the Palacio de Bellas Artes, conceived as a mediator between civic monuments and everyday urban life. By integrating the historic fabric, building heights, and traditional typologies (continuous facades, courtyards, arcades, and public plazas), it seeks to restore the human scale and reactivate local residential, cultural, and commercial uses. The architecture is based on proportion, order, and material permanence, reinforcing local identity and promoting a Historic Center that is lived in, not just visited.

Project 2 · Architectural and Museographic Integration at the Templo Mayor

The project is developed in a highly sensitive heritage area as an architectural ensemble that articulates city, archaeology, and public space, establishing a mediating relationship between traditional architecture and the pre-Hispanic site through courtyards and galleries that allow a clear and respectful reading of the Templo Mayor. The complex incorporates cultural, academic, and service programs that reinforce urban continuity and the scale of the historic block, demonstrating how traditional architecture, expressed through a classical language, can integrate sensitively into a heritage context, acting as a frame and support for the archaeological site rather than as its protagonist.

Academic Outcomes / Final Deliverables

Each student will deliver:

- Urban and architectural analysis sheets
- Sketchbook and watercolor notebook
- Diagrams and project schemes
- Final urban and architectural intervention proposal
- Participation in a public exhibition and discussion panel

Conclusion and Objectives of the Summer School

The INTBAU Mexico 2026 Summer School aims to train professionals and students capable of intervening in heritage contexts with sensitivity and deep knowledge of traditional architecture and urbanism.

Through site analysis, drawing, watercolor, modeling, and practical workshops, participants develop tools to understand the historic city, value its cultural layers, and propose respectful, sustainable, and integrative solutions.

It is expected that students will:

- Apply classical and traditional principles in their contemporary projects
- Integrate the cultural and urban identity of the Historic Center into their proposals
- Work collaboratively in multidisciplinary teams, combining theory, practice, and creativity
- Produce concrete deliverables: sheets, sketchbooks, urban projects, watercolors, and architectural proposals ready for exhibition
- Reflect on the relationship between public and private space, history and contemporaneity, and urban sustainability

This approach seeks to cultivate critical, aesthetic, and ethical awareness in each participant, fostering a commitment to the conservation, regeneration, and activation of the historic city as a living and culturally significant space.
